In the mid-twentieth century, the SSSP was established to apply sociological theory, methods and research in the study of social problems. Its proponents were leading voices for applying the sociological imagination to relevant issues in our society, challenging our discipline, as Alfred McClung Lee did, to broaden the answer to the question, “Sociology for whom?” The point was to develop a diversity of approaches, often boldly cutting across disciplinary boundaries and frequently empowering previously marginalized voices, which would integrate a variety of techniques of data collection and analysis and conceptual innovation in the service of understanding and potentially “solving” real-life social issues, and perhaps discomfiting some power-holders and disturbing the status quo along the way. This vision still inspires us today.

Sociology in the US was a thriving enterprise at the time. And the SSSP founders were forward looking, challenging sociology and social science to “do better” by pushing it to fully embrace social justice. But, from our vantage point in a new millennium, the sociology of that era (including that of our SSSP progenitors) seems surprisingly insular: The vast majority of the research in books and journals and the teaching in classrooms focused on the United States or, occasionally, other “advanced” societies. Indeed, the idea of “society” itself was primarily identified with the nation – and the implicit assumption was that even large-scale social change was largely explained by the unfolding process of “modernization” that was inherently national in character. There were some prophets even then: C. Wright Mills’ famous exposition of the “sociological imagination” (in his 1959 book) highlighted the central role of comparative and historical perspectives in our discipline, but his was a veritable “voice in the wilderness.”

The critical turn in the 1960s and 1970s (whose leaders often strongly identified with the SSSP) not only brought a new focus to issues of race, class and gender, but also reinvigorated comparative and historical analysis. This led to a major “paradigm shift” in macro-structural research and cross-national studies, initially toward global political economy/world-system analysis, and later toward other forms of global sociology, including the world society/neo-institutional approach, and a blossoming interest in migration and various transnationalisms, etc. Today, there is a broad consensus that we live in a world dominated by “globalization” (though, of course, there is much less agreement on precisely what that means). A robust field of current research directly focuses on understanding global political economy, world cultural influences, and the ubiquity and importance of international networks. A special issue of our journal devoted to “Globalization and Social Problems” in 2001 and the subsequent founding and rapid growth of the SSSP Global Division marked the rising interest in global/international issues within our society. This work is diverse and includes studies on changing international divisions of labor; the transnational nature of race, class and gender hierarchies; population dynamics and migratory flows across the entire earth; the unequal spread of science, technology and innovation; and the worldwide dynamic of today’s ecological crisis, among others. Clearly, the 2016 SSSP conference should be a platform to discuss these obviously “global” social problems – they are among the world’s most pressing. Indeed, arriving at some sort of “solution” to vexing issues like world climate change, intensifying global inequality, and the threat of war in an era of weapons of mass destruction are imperative for the survival of humanity on this planet.

But I hope this theme is not limited to a few explicitly global/comparative sessions or papers, or the work of some of us who specialize in this sort of research. My view, perhaps in the tradition of SSSP, is a much more “radical” one than that! While I know that many of my colleagues, in their narrow silos of specialization probably don’t spend much time considering this, in fact,
I would argue that ALL of the social problems we study today, in fact, are impacted by various global forces. Virtually every subfield and nearly all research – including that which seems to have much more narrow geographic or institutional foci – can be enriched by “bringing the global in,” and locating the specific sociological facts in term of their places in a matrix of various worldwide vectors of global influence, flows, and structures. Inequalities of gender, race, disability, sexual orientation/identity, aging, health, labor, and class in this country (and around the world) are increasingly and inexorably connected to worldwide currents; institutions like schools, the family, the criminal justice system, workplaces and neighborhoods are also rapidly “globalizing.” If we “leave this out,” our work will be not only scientifically “incomplete,” but also less likely to be relevant for formulating strategies for social change. I challenge all of you to bring a “global imagination” to your analysis to complement our sociological one: To remain relevant in our 21st century world – and honor the best traditions of SSSP – this is an imperative, not an option!

It is very appropriate that this particular conference will occur in Seattle. Not only was this the flash-point of massive demonstrations against the World Trade Organization in 2001 (bringing together, in the famous parlance, “turtles and teamsters” as well as an international cast of feminists and people of color: all in a protest against global capitalism). The city is also a key node geographically positioned on the Pacific Rim and, increasingly is at the center of dynamic networks of world trade, commerce, communication, migration, and technological change. It is a place where there is much inequality and many social problems, but also a vibrant social activist community. What a marvelous venue to discuss globalizing social problems! Consider yourself invited!

@SSSP1org
Welcome to Seattle!

As I write this note to you all, I am looking out my office window at the University of Washington, catching the first sights of cherry blossoms on the trees on the quad. Spring is indeed just around the corner. When you arrive in August, the cherry blossoms will be gone, but they will be replaced with lush greens, much warmer temperatures, breathtaking views of our surrounding mountain ranges, and, perhaps most important to those of us who live here year-round, sunshine!

Seattle is, however, so much more than its rainy reputation may suggest, and I do hope you are able to make the most of your time here in our growing city. We are a young city with an important history, and you are visiting us at the edge of great change.

We are a city named after Duwamish Indian leader Sealth. We are a city built on lumber, coal, and fishing, and we are a city that has been revitalized at various moments by art, political uproar, major manufacturing, protests, and our deep water ports. We were an instant boom town during the Yukon gold rush, and we are a current boom town for the tech rush. We were and are a city affected by war. World War I transformed the city’s ship building industry, with 20% of the nations wartime ship production emerging from our manufacturers. World War II brought the first evacuation of all Japanese Americans on Bainbridge Island, located just north of our downtown area on Puget Sound. The evacuations on Bainbridge Island became the devastating model for all evacuations of Japanese Americans from the west coast.

We are a city that’s been fueled by grunge, chocolate, and coffee. We are a city that is home to one of the largest LGBTQ populations in the country. We are a city that is lauded for its consideration of environmentalism and sustainability in its urban planning initiatives, and we are a city that is increasingly in the news due to fast-paced gentrification, displacing historically African-American communities in the city, rent increases, and demographic shifts.

We are more recently home to the $15 minimum wage and the first elected socialist to city council. We are home to a progressive, racially, ethnically, economic, gender and sexually diverse community, but individuals and families are faced with increased challenges to remain in the city. And, as the NY Times recently stated, we are a city that is currently “trying to keep our soul” in the face of our tech boom. Like many, we are a city with a complex history, troubled race relations, ebbs and flows of growth, rich cultures, and amazing food. Unlike other cities, perhaps, we are lucky to be situated between salt and green—a city divided by water and bridges, and hugged by mountains.

We are so glad you’ll be joining us in Seattle for the SSSP meetings. We do hope that you are able to learn about our social history while reveling in our natural surroundings. To help with this, I’ve included some suggestions for activities in the pages that follow.

Welcome to the Emerald City!

Welcome to Seattle—Graduate Student Version

Welcome to Seattle! As a fellow graduate student, I have included some additional recommendations and considerations for those of us who may be on a bit more of a budget than others. Please read over the official welcome letter listed above. The letter contains a variety of recommendations for things to do in and around the city when you’re not in conference mode. However, I’ve specifically highlighted free activities below. Please also note that the restaurant guide is divided by cost. There are a variety of cheap and delicious food options in the heart of

Walking Directions to the ASA Meeting

The ASA Annual Meeting will be held at the Washington State Convention Center and the Sheraton Seattle Hotel. Both venues are less than one mile away from the Westin Seattle Hotel, and can be accessed by walking, bus, or cab/Uber.

Walking and bus directions between conference locations:

From the Westin to the Sheraton:

On foot: This is a 0.3 mile, or about 6 minute walk. Exit the Westin (main entrance) onto 5th Avenue and turn LEFT down 5th Avenue (toward Stewart Street). Walk along 5th Avenue for three blocks, crossing Stewart Street, Olive Way, and Pine Street. When you reach Pike Street, turn LEFT and walk one block until you reach 6th Avenue. Cross 6th Avenue, and turn RIGHT so that you’ll be on the same side of the street as the Sheraton, and the Sheraton Hotel will be on your LEFT.

By bus: 6th Avenue is one-way in the opposite direction of the Sheraton, and there is no easy way to get between these two hotels by bus. Taxis and Ubers are plentiful in this area, and can bring you from one hotel to the other if needed.

Cab/Uber fare: About $4-5 plus tip, one way depending on traffic.

From the Westin to the Washington State Convention Center:

On foot: This is a 0.6 mile, or about 11 minute walk. Exit the Westin (main entrance) onto 5th Avenue and turn LEFT down 5th Avenue (toward Stewart Street). Walk along 5th Avenue for three blocks, crossing Stewart Street, Olive Way, and Pine Street until you reach Pike Street. Turn LEFT on Pike Street (corner where Banana Republic is located), and walk another block to 6th Avenue, where you will see the Nike store on the corner. When you reach Nike, cross to the other side of the street, staying on Pike Street. Walk for one more block, uphill, along Pike Street (you will pass the Sheraton, as described above). You’ll see a large glass overhang above the street. The Convention Center will be below that on your RIGHT after crossing 7th Avenue.

By bus: Catching a bus still requires 0.2 miles, or 4 minutes, of walking. To begin, exit the Westin onto 5th Avenue. Turn LEFT onto 5th Avenue. Walk along 5th Avenue for one block until you reach Pine Street. Turn RIGHT to cross the street. At the corner of 5th Avenue and Pine Street (the corner where Nordstrom Rack is located) catch either the 10, 11, or 47 bus. Between the three of them, they come every 7 minutes. Get off the bus at Pike Place and Convention Place stop. When you exit the bus, turn RIGHT (heading back the way you came on bus) and the Convention Center will be on your LEFT. Bus ride takes 11 minutes.

Cab/Uber fare: About $5 plus tip, one way depending on traffic.

From the Sheraton to the Washington State Convention Center:

On foot: This is a 0.2 mile, or about a 5 minute walk. Exit the Sheraton on 6th Avenue, and turn RIGHT on 6th Avenue and walk half a block until you hit Pike Street. Turn RIGHT onto Pike Street, and walk 3 minutes, or 0.1 miles, uphill on Pike Street. You’ll see a large glass overhang above the street. The Convention Center will be below that on your RIGHT after crossing 7th Street.

Cab/Uber fare: About $4-5 plus tip, one way depending on traffic.
• There are many signs in this area that point to helpful tourist destinations. These signs are on red poles, and signs pointing to the Convention Center are in lavender.
• Bus Fare requires exact change, and is $2.75 during peak (6:00am-9:00am and 3:00pm-6:00pm weekdays only), $2.50 off peak. Request a transfer when you purchase your fare—it’s good for unlimited rides on metro buses within two hours of purchasing.
• If you have a smartphone, and plan on taking the bus during your stay, download the free app “One Bus Away” that was developed by University of Washington students and provides up-to-date information on bus arrivals and departures at each stop.
• Consult King Country Metro Trip Planner when making plans to explore the city, or head to the airport (use the Link Light Rail!)
• Google Maps also provides accurate bus and public transit information.

PART II. Annual Meeting Events
(shown in chronological order)

Arrival Meet & Greet Reception
Open to SSSP Registrants

All meeting registrants are invited to the Arrival Meet & Greet Reception on Thursday, August 18, to celebrate the opening of the 66th Annual Meeting. This social hour kicks off at 6:30pm (Location: Puget Sound, Lobby Level) and provides opportunities to renew past acquaintances, chat with old friends, and find a newcomer to befriend. New members and first-time meeting attendees are particularly encouraged to attend.

Accessibility Committee Informational Meeting

Plan to attend an informational meeting chaired by Fernando I. Rivera for those interested in or with concerns about the inclusion of people with disabilities in SSSP on Friday, August 19 from 10:30am-12:10pm (Room: Cascade II, Mezzanine Level).

Graduate Student Meeting
with the Student Board Representatives

Student Board Representatives Kathryn M. Nowotny and Kasey Henricks would like to meet with all graduate students on Friday, August 19 from 2:30pm-4:10pm (Room: Cascade II, Mezzanine Level). This will be an excellent opportunity for students to mingle and discuss any issues.

The Graduate Student Happy Hour is scheduled later in the evening from 10:00pm-11:00pm (Location: Loft, Mezzanine Level). Complimentary drinks will be provided.

Open Discussion of Proposed Resolutions
Being Proposed to the SSSP Board of Directors

Plan to attend the open forum of discussion where resolutions will be presented for discussion among concerned members on Friday, August 19 from 2:30pm-4:10pm (Room: Puget Sound, Lobby Level). Each proposed resolution will be presented by the sponsoring Division's Chairperson (or designated representative) and adequate time for discussion will be properly allotted to each. All Division Chairs should plan to participate in this session or designate a proxy from their division if unable to attend.

At the annual business meeting, the resolutions will be presented by Vice-President Ronnie Steinberg as a package for approval for action by the attending membership. The membership will vote on proposed resolutions that were discussed and revised on the first day of the meeting. If objections from the floor are raised to any specific resolution, that resolution can, by majority vote of those present, be singled out from the package, and voted on separately. Those present can either support the resolution for approval as proposed or decide to table the resolution for further discussion at the subsequent annual meeting.

Film Screening of The Crucifixion of Colored Town
with Fernando M. Perez

Plan to attend the Film Screening of The Crucifixion of Colored Town with Fernando M. Perez on Friday, August 19 from 4:30pm-6:10pm (Room: Denny, Westlake Level).

The Crucifixion of Colored Town: Mass Incarceration and the Continued Legacy of Racial Injustice in Black Miami presents a thought-provoking sociological analysis of mass incarceration, racial identity and politics, and social injustice within the context of Miami’s history. Written, produced, and directed by Miami native, sociologist, and local university professor Fernando M. Perez, the film highlights the impact of one of the most important civil rights issues of our times—mass incarceration—on Miami’s two predominantly black historic communities: Overtown and Liberty City. Through interviews with local community leaders, activists, and academics, the film chronicles the history of Black Miami, highlighting the various forms of institutional discrimination that have affected the development of these communities since the city’s inception, and how these historic forms of institutional oppression are currently manifested in the form of mass criminalization and incarceration policies. (Film: 46 minutes)

Open to SSSP Registrants

All meeting registrants are invited to the Welcoming Reception on Friday, August 19. This social hour kicks off at 6:30pm (Room: Fifth Avenue, Grand Level) and provides opportunities to renew past acquaintances, chat with old friends, and find a newcomer to befriend. Preview Film Screening of A Bold Peace: Costa Rica’s Path to Demilitarization with Matthew P. Eddy and Michael C. Dreiling

Plan to attend the Film Screening of A Bold Peace: Costa Rica’s Path to Demilitarization with Matthew P. Eddy and Michael C. Dreiling on Sunday, August 21 from 10:30am-12:10pm (Room: Cascade I-A, Mezzanine Level).

In 1948, Costa Rica abolished their military and intentionally cultivated security relationships with other nations through treaties, international laws, and international organizations. Free of the burden of military spending, they used the financial savings to invest in their people, creating strong public institutions including public higher education and universal health care. In short, Costa Ricans created a society committed to peace, solidarity, and international law. They have survived with safety and relative prosperity for over 65 years without a standing army. A Bold Peace details the events which shook the country to its foundations, culminating in the 1948 civil war and the decision to abolish the military. The Costa Rican model has survived two invasions from the Somoza dictatorship, decades of U.S. intervention in the region, and internal schisms; but the current threats may be the most formidable of all.

Optional Tours

SSSP is pleased to offer two tours. One tour is co-sponsored with the American Sociological Association (ASA). A limited number of tickets will be sold in the registration area. Those with advance reservations will receive their ticket(s) with their name badge. Tour tickets are non-refundable. The Crucifixion of Colored Town: Mass Incarceration and the Continued Legacy of Racial Injustice in Black Miami presents a thought-provoking sociological analysis of mass incarceration, racial identity and politics, and social injustice within the context of Miami’s history. Written, produced, and directed by Miami native, sociologist, and local university professor Fernando M. Perez, the film highlights the impact of one of the most important civil rights issues of our times—mass incarceration—on Miami’s two predominantly black historic communities: Overtown and Liberty City. Through interviews with local community leaders, activists, and academics, the film chronicles the history of Black Miami, highlighting the various forms of institutional discrimination that have affected the development of these communities since the city’s inception, and how these historic forms of institutional oppression are currently manifested in the form of mass criminalization and incarceration policies. This session offers the opportunity to look analytically at contemporary instances of what we are calling institutional junctures, particularly through research using institutional ethnography. Analytic attention to people’s experiences of 21st century institutional practices can broaden our understanding of these changes. What institutional juncture claims your analytic attention and why? What is happening and through what specific mechanisms does it affect differently positioned institutional participants? How do institutional ethnographic findings help institutional participants understand, explain and take effective action? “What are the major contradictions being faced by change agents or that must be faced to organize positive change in such settings?”

Session 73: The Academic Job Market
Room: Cascade I-A

Sponsor: Program Committee

Organizer & Presider: Héctor L. Delgado, University of La Verne

Description:

This session is designed to provide participants with ideas on how to improve their chances of finding a position. Panelists with experience (some of it very recent) looking and hiring for positions will kick off the discussion, but ample opportunity will be given to participants to share their own experiences and ask questions. The sooner in their graduate careers that individuals begin thinking about going on the market, the better it is, since there are things that they can do in graduate school to improve their prospects. So, this session is for Society members currently looking for a position, but also for anyone who plans to be on the market in the next three-four years -- and for anyone who feels that s/he has useful information to share with others about her/his own experiences.

THEMATIC Session 77: Labor and Policy Comparative Perspectives: China and the U.S.
Room: Olympic
Sponsor: Program Committee
Organizer, Presider & Discussant: Cesar F. Rosado Marzan, Chicago-Kent College of Law, Illinois Institute of Technology
Description:
This session combines comparative perspectives on pressing issues related to policies affecting work and labor. One paper discusses the growth of temporary agency work in China, a topic familiar in developed contexts but less studied in other contexts. While temp jobs have many times been attributed to marketization, the author explores how markets and purposeful policies expanded temporary agency work in China, contributing to a “dual” labor market. Another paper explores the link between tech jobs and urban dynamics in the world’s largest economy, the United States. Given that many local and state governments compete incessantly in the U.S. for tech jobs, developing “innovation corridors” through planning and fiscal policies, this paper helps to assess whether or not those policies can help American cities develop equitably. Finally, a third paper will explore how small and local “worker centers” in the United States can contribute to “moral economies” that help to narrow income and wealth inequality despite global market pressures pushing the opposite direction.

Papers:
“Precarization or Dualization? Temporary Agency Work and the Politics of Labor Regulation in Post-Socialist China,” Lu Zhang, Temple University

Session 90: Workshop: Experiencing and Responding to Microaggressions in the Classroom
Room: St. Helens

Sponsor: Teaching Social Problems
Organizer: Amie Thurber, Vanderbilt University
Facilitators: Amie Thurber, Vanderbilt University
Corey Dolgon, Stonehill College
Danielle Wilfong, Vanderbilt University

Description:
When teaching a course related to social inequality, it is almost guaranteed that microaggressions will take place. These seemingly small, ostensibly singular manifestations of oppression can deleteriously effect the teaching-learning environment, our students, and ourselves. As common as microaggressions are, it is equally common that educators are at times unsure of the best way to intervene, particularly in ways that maintain effective relationships with students and/or colleagues. Further, typical best practices for intervening assume the responder’s position as bystander, ignoring the ways that educators may also perpetrate or be targets of injustice. This session aims to create an active learning community wherein current and future educators can build their capacity to respond effectively to microaggressions in the classroom. After offering some guiding principles for effective interventions, the facilitators will lead participants through a skill-building sessions that draws from participants’ own experiences and questions.

Presider: Callie Watkins Liu, Brandeis University

Discussant: Thomas Pineros Shields, University of Massachusetts Lowell

Description:
Academic research is often exclusive to those with access to institutions of higher education. For low-income, undocumented, first-generation and/or people of color, access to these institutions is still disproportionately low. So often, we find our communities being ventriloquized by academics who, however well intentioned, carry out this work in an extractive model. That is, they can carry out a research project without: intimately knowing the lived experiences of the communities; accountability for sharing their findings with participants; or living with the ongoing impacts affecting the communities they are studying. Community engaged research is one way to address some of these challenges, however even this approach can still raise important questions. Drawing on first hand experiences with community engaged research as people of color in the academy and participants in community research processes, the authors in this session seek to challenge research paradigms by: decentering academia as the sole site for knowledge production; questioning ‘insider’ ‘outsider’ assumptions in participatory research, interrogating assumptions of what meaningful participation looks like, and challenge assumptions that researchers are outside of the community they are researching with.

Session 105: A Sociology of Success: Getting it Right in the Global Fight for Racial Justice
Room: Denny

Sponsor: Racial and Ethnic Minorities

Organizer & Presider: Michael L. Rosino, University of Connecticut

Description:

Racial injustice is, in the words of W.E.B. Du Bois, not simply a localized social problem but a “problem of humanity.” People all across the globe have heeded the call to fight racial injustice in its numerous forms such as the denial of human rights and access to essential resources to racialized groups, everyday instances of racial discrimination in interactions, racialized state violence, and institutional barriers to liberation and equality. This session seeks to illuminate the ways in which individuals, social movements, groups, and organizations have sought to engage in the struggle for racial justice in various global contexts. Sessions that focus on domestic and non-domestic issues, cases, and dynamics will be considered. I look forward to a fruitful discussion of these prescient issues.

Description:

In 1948, Costa Rica abolished their military and intentionally cultivated security relationships with other nations through treaties, international laws, and international organizations. Free of the burden of military spending, they used the financial savings to invest in their people, creating strong public institutions including public higher education and universal health care. In short, Costa Ricans created a society committed to peace, solidarity, and international law. They have survived with safety and relative prosperity for over 65 years without a standing army. A Bold Peace details the events which shook the country to its foundations, culminating in the 1948 civil war and the decision to abolish the military. The Costa Rican model has survived two invasions from the Somoza dictatorship, decades of U.S. intervention in the region, and internal schisms; but the current threats may be the most formidable of all. This is a preview screening.

Session 140: Challenges to Globalized High-Stakes Standardized Testing
Room: Adams

Sponsor: Program Committee

Organizer & Presider: LaNysha T. Adams, DC Office of the State Superintendent of Education

Description:

Several scholars have investigated the relationship between the rise of neoliberalism and top-down accountability in education (Ambrosio, 2013; Basu, 2004; Giroux, 2002; Kerr, 2014). In many U.S. investigations, this relationship manifests as high-stakes standardized tests and privatized school choice. Room: Cascade II

Sponsors: Institutional Ethnography
Sport, Leisure, and the Body

Organizer: Matthew Strang, York University, Canada
Presider: Alison Fisher, York University, Canada

Description:

Achieving and exercising wellness is contingent on having certain abilities as well as possessing access to resources and supports in our broader social context. This session aims to elucidate the links between wellness and these factors, as they come into contact with our health and our bodies, in daily life. Increasingly, people in their everyday life are doing more work towards, on and through their bodies and their health to achieve what is perceived to be wellness. How might that work converge, and diverge with (ruling) relations of racialization, sexualization, gender, ability, age and other factors? What empirical links exist between everyday life and its social organization around bodies, health and wellness? In addition to including papers that grapple with these questions, this session will include presentations that use Institutional Ethnography, as well as other frameworks, to understand and map out these relations. Papers can describe and reflect critically on specific empirical research projects, take a theoretical, methodological approach or adopt a more creative form.

Session 169: Racial Formation and Racialization of Arabs, Middle Easterners, South Asians, and Muslims
Room: Olympic

Sponsor: Program Committee

Organizer, President & Discussant: Bradley J. Zopf, University of Illinois at Chicago

Description:

Despite the diversity among Arabs, Middle Easterners, and South Asians (and often Muslims), many scholars contend that these groups share race-based experiences of exclusion, prejudice, and discrimination. Increasingly scholars are turning to the ‘racialization’ or ‘racial formation’ framework for explaining the position of Arabs/Middle Easterners/South Asians/Muslims in the United States. In the post 9/11 era, these groups become racialized as terrorist and foreigner and are often seen as homogeneous. For example, the Sikh community in the U.S is often mistaken for Muslim due to their religious presentation of turban and beard. The history of Arab, Middle Eastern, South Asian, and Muslim racial formation illustrates a complex interplay of race, ethnicity, geography, religion, and foreign policy (Cainkar 2006) and emphasizes shared experiences of prejudice and discrimination, perceptions of shared culture, religion, language, or national-origin, and constructed stereotype based on phenotype and dress (see Naber 2008, Shryock 2008, Tehranian 2009, Cainkar 2010). This panel seeks to compare how Arabs, Middle Easterners, South Asians, and/or Muslims perceive their own racial formation and examines the processes and practices through which their racial positionality or identity is constructed, expressed, and managed. Simply put, this panel will highlight how these groups interpret, give meaning, and respond to racialization.

Description:

The papers in this session explore the nexus between the environment and health, broadly construed. In particular, the papers in this session conceptualize an active interaction between people and their surrounding environments, both in everyday life and in the midst of sudden disruptions. This interaction is mediated both by belief systems and by the physical environment itself. The environment, or place, is considered as an active agent in the pursuit and achievement of health.

Today precarious work presents perhaps the greatest global challenge to worker well-being, and has become a major rallying point for worker mobilization around the world. This conference focuses on analyzing the growth of precarious employment and informal labor, its consequences for workers and their families, the challenges it poses to worker organizing and collective mobilization, and how workers and other social actors are responding to precariousness. We seek to understand the patterns of social and economic domination of labor shaped by the state, capital, gender, class, age, ethnicity, skills, and citizenship, and examine the manifestations of labor resistance and acquiescence in their specific contexts.

The conference is initiated by the American Sociological Association (ASA)’s Labor and Labor Movements Section, the International Sociological Association (ISA)’s Research Committee on Labor Movements (RC44), and the Chinese Sociological Association’s China Association of Work and Labor (CAWL). It builds in part on an ongoing scholarly exchange between the ASA Labor Section and the CAWL. The conference program will focus on the United States and China, but will include a range of global cases and perspectives. Interdisciplinary approaches and innovative research methods are welcomed.

Our globalized, cyber-mediated world characterized by extraordinary social, political, economic, and moral fragmentation raises a variety of questions about social problems, including: How do people who experience the consequences of social problems understand the causes of their misery? How do people not suffering understand the experiences of those who do? How do activists convince others to work toward social change? The answer to a variety of such questions is the same: Narratives, or what simply are called “stories” in daily life. Social problem narratives create meaning from the buzzing confusion of practical experience, they convey complex experiences to others, they motivate, they shape public opinion and social action.

Whether told as stories about unique people facing specific troubles or about types of people—the abused child, the terrorist, the welfare mother—in types of situations, social problem narratives are pervasive in daily life. Individuals tell stories to make sense of their troubling experiences, politicians tell stories to sell themselves and their policies; teachers, preachers and parents use stories to convey moral lessons; courts work through the telling and evaluating of stories. Narratives about social problems are pervasive because they are persuasive. Unlike statistics or research, stories can appeal to minds and to hearts: The story of the “Migrant Mother” told through the photographs of depression-era photographer, Dorothea Lange, for example, remains to this day a compelling testimony of the human tragedy created by economic collapse.

Regardless of the extent to which images in a story match indicators of empirical reality, social problem narratives can be personally, socially, and politically consequential. These narratives are about power: Those told by people in privileged positions are assumed to be believable and important, while those told by others are routinely challenged, if not completely silenced; stories whose plots, characters, and morals reflect the status quo are more likely to be positively evaluated than those challenging entrenched power and privilege. Stories become material power when they shape public opinion and social policy. Yet social actors most certainly are not cultural robots who simply accept whatever images of them circulate in the social world. On the contrary: Narratives can be a site of resistance as individuals and groups challenge the truth of those offering ideological support for oppression. Resistance, in turn, can lead to authoring and promoting new stories that foster equality and thus are transformative.

In order to understand public reactions toward social problems and, in order to do something about these conditions causing so much human misery, we need to know much more about the work of social problem narratives. In a world of countless competing stories, we need to know how some—and only some—stories achieve widespread cognitive and emotional appeal and go on to influence public opinion and social policy; how different stories appeal to people in different social positions. We need to know how stories promoting particular images of social problems reflect and challenge and/or perpetuate existing inequalities and structures of power, and how stories encourage or discourage social change. We need to more fully understand how story contents and meanings change as they circulate through particular societies and throughout the globe.
The power and workings of social problems narratives will be the focus of our conversations at the 2017 meetings of the Society for the Study of Social Problems to be held in the fascinating, beautiful, bi-lingual, multi-cultural city of Montreal. I look forward to seeing you there.

Bon voyage!

Bully Nation
How the American Establishment Creates a Bullying Society
Charles Derber and Yale R. Magrass

“This thoughtful study expertly dissects the ‘bullying scourge’ that poisons lives and society, exposing its roots in the institutional structure of a ‘militaristic capitalist culture’ that it reflects and nurtures, while also revealing the encouraging reactions that may offer cures for the malady and the factors that engender it.” —Noam Chomsky

“Bully Nation is absolutely terrific, an important, powerful and timely book that should be read by academic and public audiences alike.”

WINNER OF THE 2015 C. WRIGHT MILLS AWARD

UNEQUAL CITY
Race, Schools, and Perceptions of Injustice

Chicago has long struggled with racial residential segregation, high rates of poverty, and deepening class stratification, and can be a challenging place for adolescents to grow up. In this pioneering analysis of the intersection of race, place, and opportunity, sociologist and criminal justice expert Carla Shedd illuminates how schools either reinforce or ameliorate the social inequalities that shape the worlds of these adolescents. By amplifying the oft-ignored voices of marginalized adolescents, Unequal City opens a door onto a generation whose perceptions and experiences reflect the growing inequalities in contemporary society.

“[Unequal City] should be required reading for anyone who wants to understand the relationship between inequality and urban education.”
— Elijah Anderson, William K. Lanman, Jr. Professor of Sociology, Yale University
