

Fighting Better

Constructive Conflicts in America

The people in the United States are experiencing an extreme degree of division, political partisanship, and civic disorder. Destructive fights are waged about matters such as misinformation, voting rights, school curriculum, government spending, and personal privacy. How can these distressing circumstances be overcome? More specifically, what makes the difference between conflicts that result in progress versus those that further contribute to a greatly polarized, extremely unequal, and distressed society?

FEATURES

- Examines how waging conflicts constructively and destructively have changed the degree of class, status, and power inequality in America since 1945
- Includes detailed analyses of numerous US conflicts that provide insight about alternative ways to fight for greater equality
- Offers recommendations for waging conflict constructively to help overcome the current political and societal distress in the US
